

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A common rail injector is proposed which is very compact in structure and nevertheless brings high closing forces to bear at the end of the injection. This is attained, among other provisions, in that the closing piston has a larger diameter than the nozzle needle.